Artist Talk and Book Launch with Fiona Jack

1:30pm - 3pm

Join us for an early afternoon talk with artist Fiona Jack as she discusses the Riverbed project, and the connections between this work and the personal and political histories of her Great Aunt – the radical communist and suffragette Helen Crawford.

There will also be a launch for Fiona's new book Working Together; Banner Projects 2013-2018, designed and published by DDMMYY.

Audience members have an opportunity to work with clay and make rocks for the Riverbed during this kōrero if they wish to.

After this talk a bus will leave at 3.30pm for the opening of Te Tuhi.

In Conversation: Sue Bradford and Jack Tame

6pm - 8pm

TVNZ Breakfast co-host and journalist Jack Tame joins activist, former Green MP and educator Sue Bradford in a public conversation around the legacy of Aotearoa New Zealand's politics and how this might define our world now. Building on Sue Bradford's biography Constant Radical by Jenny Chamberlain, the conversation will attempt to provide insight between generations, offer a political mindmap of today and address social challenges within contemporary Aotearoa. Audience members have an opportunity to work with clay and make rocks for the Riverbed during this kōrero if they wish to.

Thursday 31 January 2019

Evening Workshop

6pm - 8pm

Join Fiona Jack and Sue Bradford for a participatory workshop exploring the question "What can an art school be?". In this changing world where anyone can be an artist and elitist cultural structures are destabilised, we will collectively consider how art can be taught/learned, with and for whom, in what contexts, and to what end? Participants will be invited to make rocks for 'Riverbed' while engaging in conversation.

Michael Asher and Baked Beans

Sue Bradford and Fiona Jack in conversation

6pm - 8pm

Sue Bradford and Fiona Jack will discuss their mutual interest in radical pedagogies and the role this has played in the Riverbed project. Audience members have an opportunity to work with clay and make rocks for Riverbed during this kōrero if they wish to.

Saturday 2 March 2019

Daytime Workshop with Tamariki

11am - 1pm

Join Fiona Jack and Sue Bradford for a workshop where participants will be invited to make rocks for Riverbed while engaging in conversation with Fiona, Sue and others. Children are welcome to attend this workshop and be in the space with their parents/caregivers. Children are invited to work with clay, and there will be other activities for children available also. Topic to be confirmed - please see website for details: artspace.org.nz
